POLICY:

An obligor may pay money to the Child Support Services Division (CSSD) to satisfy the obligor's ongoing support obligation as well as any additional amount of money intended by the obligor to be used for support of the child.

For the purpose of child support payment distribution priorities, amounts received must be treated first as current support for the month in which the payment was received. If any amounts received are in excess of the current support, these excess amounts shall be treated as amounts which represent payment on the required support obligation for previous months.

In the event an obligor owes support on multiple cases, payment received shall be prorated and applied to ongoing support and then arrears.

There will be no manual application of child support payments unless the obligor can provide clear and convincing evidence that hardship to the family exist. A Child Support Manager (CSM) must review and approve all hardship requests.
