

Friendly Knowledgeable Caseworkers

Once your child support order is established, your case will be assigned to a section of case workers. A caseworker from the section will be available to answer your questions and provide updates on your case.

We understand that issues surrounding children and money often become painfully difficult and complex. Emotions may run high and communications can breakdown. The situation can be made worse if money issues between parents are not dealt with fairly, and children often suffer as a result. The CSED can help both parents.

DID YOU KNOW?

The Child Support Enforcement Division process is designed to make sure children receive the support they need.

WHO CAN APPLY FOR SERVICES?

Both the obligee and obligor, as well as anyone with whom the child resides can apply for CSED services.

Recipients of Alaska Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF), Native Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (NTANF) or children in state custody automatically receive child support services. All others must fill out an application form.

How is a Child Support Order Established?

CSED can establish an administrative child support order if there is no court order. Alaska Civil Rule 90.3 requires the child support obligation to be based on the obligor's ability to pay.

Court Order

The court can establish a child support order.

If you have a child support order from the court you can apply for services at CSED. We will set up a case and enforce the court order for you.

Medical Support

Parents are required to provide health insurance for their children if it is available at a reasonable cost.

Credit for health insurance may raise or lower the amount of a parent's monthly support, depending on which parent provides the coverage. Call CSED or check our web page for more information.

Wage Withholding

Employer wage withholding (payroll deduction) is required by federal law.

State law prohibits an employer from refusing to hire or from firing an employee because of a withholding order. The order does not mean that a parent isn't being responsible; it just means that a child needs support.

We are with you every step of the way - MODIFICATIONS

Either parent can request a review of a child support order if circumstances change. Both parents will be notified of the request and may be required to provide financial information.

CSED can update a child support order if the original order was established by CSED.

Court orders can only be modified by a court.
